WORLD'S FAIR

Your Pittsburgh Council is sponsoring a weekend jaunt to New York City and the World's Fair. The Hostellers will depart on Wednesday, September 9th, and return on Sunday the 13th. The first night will be spent at Victor Sorokin's farm in New Jersey, the other three nights at the Mitchel Gardens National Hostel on Long Island.

They have Thursday and Friday scheduled for fairgoing, Saturday for touring the City, and Sunday for loafing and driving back to Pittsburgh.

The Mitchel Gardens facilities include: baths, bunk beds, pillows, kitchen, and parking space.

New York City has thoughtfully provided a few interesting attractions for our AYHers. The Ice Capades will be in town, the Washington Square Art Exhibit will have just opened, and the Brooklyn Botanical Gardens will be displaying a new, special World's Fair Flower.

Any inquiries please see or phone Barbara Di Gregorio, phone No.

OPEN HOUSE

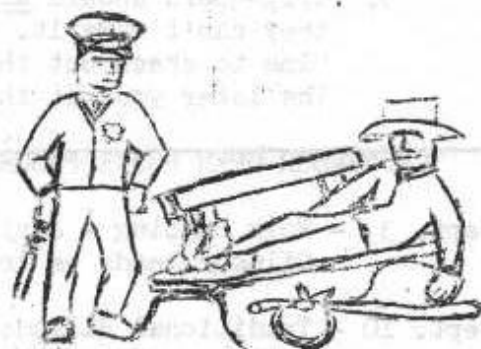

Looking for a refreshing way to spend an evening? For something a little different, attend one of our open house programs. Things get underway at 8:30, Thursday evening.

ELECTIONS COMING; IF YOU DON'T COME, YOU MIGHT BE ELECTED!

Elections will be Thursday, the 24th of September at 8:00. Be sure to come and vote. Who knows, you might be an officer without knowing it.

Actually, there are many posts to be filled, and few of them require any deep practical knowledge as they mostly call for organizing and looking after things.

So if you would like to try your hand at officering come to open house some Thursday evening before election time and tell the nominating people.

THE TRIANGLE TAKES TO THE ROAD

Yes, friends, we've been forced to leave our perch in the Arts and Crafts Building attic, and move on to better sanctuary—The Bellefield Presbyterian Church, next to Webster Hall Hotel. So, from now on address all Care Packages to our new Triangle office; and now all you anxious workers know where to come.

A CANOE TRIP ON THE UPPER YOUGHIOGHENY RIVER, BEING AN ACCOUNT OF CURIOUS
HAPPENINGS ON THE 2ND OF AUGUST

Upon gathering on the morning of our departure, we immediately set to work securing our craft for the journey. This labor was exceedingly short and we undertook the start of our trip.

After a pleasant ride over the highways (during which your author tried to go to sleep) we arrived at the port of departure where we unlimbered our ships and made ready for travel upon the majestic waterway.

While paddling our silver craft peacefully down the streams where Indians once dwelt, we entertained ourselves by looking for leaks. In fact, this provided so much fun we did so for the entire trip.

While in the lead the crew of the boat saw strange objects float down the water ---sponges, paddles, broken grips.

We were unable to ascertain from whence the unusual materials came.

We bathed in the fresh, cold water and later partook of our several banquets. Our ship having gotten under way with a change of crew, it got into many odd positions several of which required new paddling procedures. Just as we landed our watercraft a storm arose and after making our way to shelter from the elements, which were profuse, we spent the next half an hour engaged in dripping, a game which we partook of collectively; after this refreshing sport we tried changing. After lashing our equipment securely, we returned home "dragging" the other vehicle in our party.

And so ends the story. Details cannot be obtained as yet -- the local constabulary is too absorbed in them.

There are four kinds of people at AYH  meeting-goers, meeting-holders, trip-goers, and trip-leaders. Each plays a certain part which he must live up to.

1. Meeting-goers should be polite to the meeting-holders and should be coming to the meetings for a purpose.
2. Meeting-holders, if they cannot make the meeting, should call one of the officers in advance. The ones that do show should be on time.
3. Trip-goers should always reserve with the leader and always call if they can't make it. If they do go, they should be there in enough time to check out the equipment before the stated departure time. The later you get there, the less time you have on the trip.

4. The trip-leaders should put their trips into the Golden Triangle and announce them at meetings, and pick a substitute leader if you can't make it. A comment was recently made of one of our meetings, "It looks like a bunch of people waiting for a bus." . . . and it does. D.M.
