PERSONALITY OF THE MONTH

John Schuster has enlisted in the Air Force. He will be leaving for Lackland Air Force Base, Texas sometime in February. John is known to Hostellers as the intrepid spirit behind this winter's Monday night ice skating trips. Canceled only a few times--by rain, a sprained back and 30" of snow--the ice skating trips have gone to North Park every Monday night since November. John is a lifetime Pittsburgher and resident of Squirrel Hill. Until a few years ago he maintained a highly successful paper route in this area. He has been an A.Y.H. member for about 2 years and does cycling when the ice melts. John's interest in ice skating is second only to his enthusiasm for roller skating. He does "roller dancing" we hear. After basic training John hopes to specialize in electronics in his Air Force career. Peter Schuster, John's older brother, is also an A.Y.H. member. He is often seen on caving and rock-climbing trips. (C.L.)

Editorial - D. Magram

Before one of you Monday Morning Quarter Backs opens his mouth to complain about the size of this paper (instead of writing for it or helping to print it) just remember our paper is only what you make it. If we end up with only a half-page of articles next time, you will get a half-page paper. If you won't write columns, trips, reports, stories, etc., nobody will ever read them.

Chivalry

a Post-Mortem

by Dave Magrum

People (mostly the women) have been mourning the death of chivalry. All the female population asks, "Why have men become so crude and ungentlemanly?" All right girls, let's see who killed chivalry.

In 1900 women, after a hard fight, started getting jobs like the men did. In 1920 after another hard fight, they got the right to vote. From there they fought hard and won the right to eat like, dress like, be entertained and to entertain like men. In their fight for equality they succeeded in taking jobs away from the men, leaving families starving so they could prove themselves equal. So, dear lady, if I stood up for you on the bus, so you could sit down (after a long day's work at an office that formerly employed men) I would undo all those years of struggle to become equal in a few seconds. I would renounce that long battle. So, lady, we are equal--and you can stand.
